

Humanitarian Crisis in Sudan

ARTICLE READING

The three-year conflict in Sudan continues to create a dire humanitarian emergency that demands urgent global attention. With widespread violence and mass displacement, hundreds of thousands of people are sheltering in precarious conditions, such as in the city of El Obeid, where hunger and resource shortages are rapidly deepening. Humanitarians and rights defenders are calling for sustained international engagement to address the overwhelming needs of the survivors and to hold perpetrators of human rights abuses accountable.